"A fresh look at skin to skin"

by
Suzanne Colson, PhD

If you routinely tell all mothers that they should have at least 1 hour of skin to skin contact following birth, then this presentation is for you !

After 10 years of urging mothers to breastfeed in naked contact, we need to ask some pertinent questions:

- * Does early ventral nudity really cause mothers to breastfeed for longer?
- * Does skin to skin contact embody what other mammals do?
- * Does sitting upright and latching a baby using the rugby hold in skin to skin contact really help when there are breastfeeding problems?
- * Is skin-to-skin contact always safe? If not, why not?

on skin-to-skin contact!
